BIOGRAPHY

Caitlin DiMotta brings a rare combination of legal expertise and artistic insight to her practice, serving as a trusted advisor to clients across various industries including film, television, and publishing. Caitlin represents authors, writers, artists, producers, creators, production companies, and media ventures, helping them navigate complex business and legal matters with a long-term, strategic view. Caitlin also serves as outside general counsel to Entangled Publishing, LLC, Premeditated Productions, Inc., and Tiny Onion, Inc. Known for her ability to form deep, long-term relationships with clients, she works closely with each individual or business to understand their goals and deliver highly effective, personalized advocacy. With a client-centric approach, Caitlin is committed to providing strategic guidance that aligns with both the immediate and future needs of her clients' business and legal matters.

Caitlin has earned recognition by Variety as a leader in entertainment law and she is ranked as Up & Coming: Media & Entertainment: Transactional: Mainly Talent by Chambers & Partners USA, a testament to her outstanding contributions to the legal field. For nearly two decades, Caitlin has been among a very small group of attorneys worldwide who focus on representing comic book creators in an industry that evolves exponentially year over year.

Her passion for the arts and entertainment is not just professional—it's personal. Before embarking on her legal career, Caitlin enjoyed a decade-long career as a professional dancer, performing with national and international dance companies and collaborating with renowned choreographers. This unique experience allows her to approach her legal work with a deep understanding of the creative challenges and opportunities her clients face in the entertainment and publishing industries. Whether advising on publishing contracts, talent negotiations, or media partnerships, Caitlin's intimate knowledge of the industry gives her clients an edge in achieving their objectives.

Admitted to practice law in California, Washington, and New Mexico, Caitlin is dedicated to providing exceptional service to clients in entertainment, publishing, and beyond.
